

unILINK

November 1, 2018

Rushing into the CPTPP a reckless error, and eliminating the Ontario College of Trades may endanger public safety. Meanwhile, the B.C. Labour Relations Code Review Panel proposes worker-friendly recommendations, asbestos is finally banned and the federal government delivers on pay equity.

Unifor welcomes federal launch of proactive pay equity legislation to close the gender wage gap.

READ MORE

Read the latest issue of the Pulse for health care news, including bargaining updates and member mobilization.

READ MORE

IN THE NEWS

Ford's plan to scrap the Ontario College of Trades may harm skilled trade workers and threaten future excellence in trades.

READ MORE

Unifor calls for deeper study of the CPTPP, with a focus on Canada's auto industry.

READ MORE

Join members in NB in supporting the Throne Speech and its proposed advances for workers' rights and women's equality.

READ MORE

Members of the Canadian negotiating team, federal MPs, political staff and reporters attend Unifor's USMCA reception.

READ MORE

Recommendations from the B.C. Labour Relations Code Review Panel to give British Columbians more rights at work.

READ MORE

BARGAINING UPDATES

Westin Prince hotel workers in Toronto, Local 7575 members, negotiate significant improvements after joining Unifor.

READ MORE

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT

Government regulations ban use of asbestos and asbestos containing products in Canada as of December 30.

READ MORE

RESOURCES

This Women's History Month, we honoured the countless women in Canada who paved the way for advancing workers' rights.

READ MORE

